

Opportunities for Sponsorship

The 6th Annual Rocky Mountain Bioinformatics Conference – Rocky '08 will be held this year in Snowmass Colorado, December 4 - 7, 2008.

Rocky '08 is an official conference of the International Society for Computational Biology (ISCB) hosted by the University of Colorado Computational Bioscience Program.

Rocky '08 continues the tradition of bringing together top scientists, leading industrialists and aspiring trainees for a relaxed and fascinating three days of computational biology. Our diverse attendees come from universities, research centers, commercial enterprises and government labs from around the world, discussing a broad range of topics from text mining to supercomputing, from pharmacogenetics to ecosystem mapping. With its combination of invited addresses, lightning talks, discussion sessions and unstructured interactions, Rocky has consistently launched new collaborations and new partnerships of all kinds.

Our success is tied to the participation of our industrial sponsors. Sponsors receive not only recognition and presentation opportunities, but important connections to communities of customers and to key innovators and opinion leaders. Previous sponsors include not only bioinformatics companies but also instrument, computer and software vendors, as well as biotechnology and pharmaceutical companies. If you might be interested in sponsoring this exciting event, please contact us at your earliest convenience.
