Establish your company as a thought leader, build brand awareness, and gain sales leads in the Latin American bioinformatics community!

An official conference of the International Society for Computational Biology (ISCB) co-hosted by the Associação Brasileira de Bioinformática e Biologia Computacional (AB3C).

The third International Society for Computational Biology Latin America Conference on Bioinformatics (ISCB-Latin America) is the premier bioinformatics meeting in the region that attracts several hundred world-class scientists.

This year's conference will be held at the Universidade Federal de Minas Gerais, in Belo Horizonte, Brazil, on October 28-30, 2014. Many essential topics will be featured, including drug discovery, genomics, structural biology, and next generation sequencing.

Professors, researchers, trainees, industry professionals, and others come from throughout the Americas and Europe to learn the latest advances in computational biology and bioinformatics.
This year's conference in Brazil features outstanding keynote speakers, numerous talks, tutorials, workshops, and terrific face-to-face time during poster sessions and social events. A satellite symposium will also be held one day prior to the official meeting.
